Supporting troops in Iraq with care packages

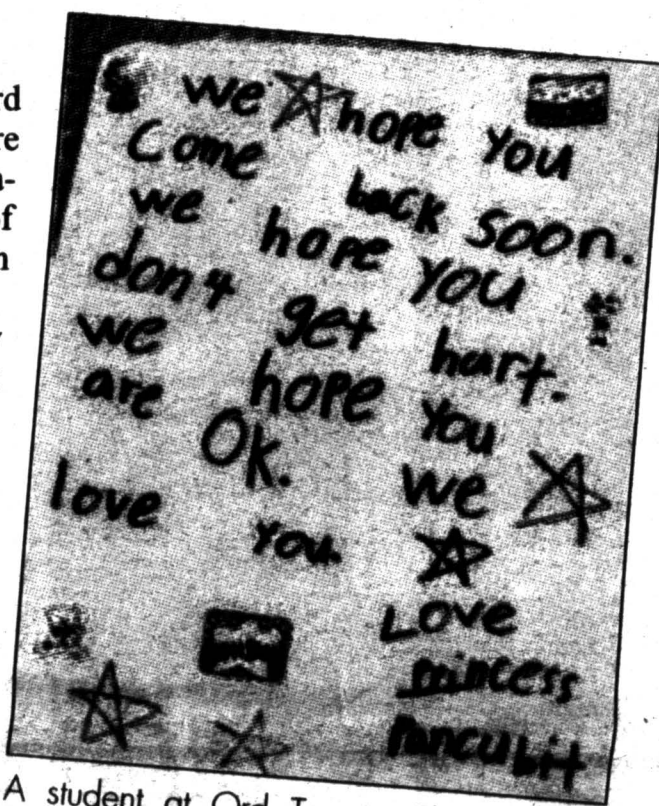

By REGAN CAREY

WHEN JOAN Bizzozero heard about a fundraising drive in Delaware to buy air conditioners for troops stationed in the sweltering deserts of Iraq, she was inspired to take action herself.

"Our soldiers need to know they've got a whole bunch of support here in the states," she said. A phone call to the Defense Language Institute in Monterey connected her with Operation Yellow Ribbon in San Jose, a group that sends care packages to servicemen and women deployed overseas. Bizzozero then suggested forming a Monterey branch to fellow board members of a Monterey Bay Republican Women's group, and they agreed it was a great idea.

So did a lot of other people.

"Everyone has just been so generous," Bizzozero said. Some of the contributions and volunteers for the Yellow Ribbon project came after the

Police: Gangs target unlocked cars, homes

By MARY BROWNFIELD

THIEVES HIT seven cars and one residence in northeast Carmel this week, making off with wallets, I.D.s, a cell phone and other valuables. All the cars were unlocked, according to Carmel Police Sgt. Pete Poitras, and the home — in which a woman and her two children were sleeping — was entered through the garage after the burglars stole the garage door opener out of the resident's unlocked car.

It appears they were interrupted while ransacking the home and fled, but the residents slept through the intrusion and didn't discover anything amiss until 5:20 a.m. Oct. 22.

Poitras said the multiple thefts go beyond the quest for valuables. Gangs in and outside prison have discovered identity theft and credit card fraud are more profitable, less dangerous and carry lower penalties than traditional violent robberies, he said.

High turnout expected in all-mail election

By MARY BROWNFIELD

BALLOTS FOR Monterey County's first all-mail election hit 133,500 voters' mailboxes last week and aren't due until Nov. 4, but thousands have already been punched and returned to the elections department.

Registrar Tony Anchondo believes the 15,000 ballots received so far — including more than 3,000 Thursday — bode well for a high turnout in an election which includes candidates for three water board seats.

"In an off-off-year election like this, we would normally expect 15 percent turnout, or about 20,000 votes," he said. "When the dust settles and the smoke clears, I expect a 40-plus percent turnout."

Water board candidates on all sides agreed high turnouts are good for local politics.

"It's a great experiment that should be encouraged," said Robert Pacelli, vying for the Pacific Grove/Pebble Beach seat also sought by Michelle Knight. "Anything that increases voter participation is good."

Slatemate and incumbent Zan Henson, battling Larry Foy to represent Carmel Valley, Carmel and part of Pebble Beach, hailed the early numbers and said he hopes they reflect the sentiment of voters in past elections with much lower turnouts.

"One hopes that the people who have voted in the past have accurately represented the electorate," Henson said, adding that statistics indicate they should. "Having a higher turnout will either validate or confound previous results."

MIXED-INCOME VILLAGE COULD SPROUT ON C.V. GOLF COURSE

By REGAN CAREY

CARMEL VALLEY may soon lose one of its golf courses and gain something it really needs — affordable housing.

On Tuesday, Rancho Cañada Golf Club in Carmel Valley announced plans to convert one of its two 18-hole courses into a compact, mixed-income village adjacent to Carmel Middle School.

Rancho Cañada's president, Nick Lombardo, who abandoned a longtime dream of building a destination lodge in favor of this project, credited his involvement in the Monterey County General Plan Update Refinement Group as awakening him to the affordable housing crisis in the county.

"Without providing livable, good housing for our people we will be a diminishing county," he said.

According to preliminary studies, the 72-acre parcel under consideration would accommodate nearly 280 units, of which up to 50 percent could be set aside as workforce and affordable housing, well beyond the 20 percent required by county ordinance for new housing developments.

Lombardo used one of his own employees as an example

On a large parcel behind Carmel Middle School, a mixed-use residential village, including up to 140 units of "workforce housing," has been proposed by the owners of Rancho Cañada.

CARMEL WOMAN SEEKS KIDNEY DONOR

By MARY BROWNFIELD

PERHAPS THE greatest threat to Diane Carroll's life is that she doesn't look or act mortally ill.

But she is. In fact, after a decades-long battle with diabetes, the Camino Real resident is in desperate need of a kidney donor with type-O blood.

"I'm pretty strong and always try to make it look like there's nothing wrong," said Carroll, an interior designer who worked in a downtown design studio for 21 years.

"People say, 'You don't look unwell,' and they don't think there's an urgency, but there is."

First diagnosed with diabetes 35 years ago at the age of 16, Carroll is accustomed to coping with the illness — carefully monitoring her blood sugar and administering insulin — but it has finally reached a level

'It's so difficult to ask, even, but I need to somehow have the message out there.'

Diane Carroll

she can't manage on her own.

"It's a disease that continues to degrade the whole body, and it leads to trouble with the eyes — I've had numerous eye surgeries — strokes, heart attacks and kidney failure, which I'm in right now."

But when it comes to asking for help, "I'm just not a taker," she said, her voice choked with emotion. "It's so difficult to ask, even, but I need to somehow have the message out there."

With her kidneys functioning at 15 percent and full failure imminent, Carroll has an idea of what lies ahead if she is unable to find a donor. Fourteen years ago, she watched a close friend die of the same condition.

"I was the one on the list to call when something went wrong," she said.

She's been careful to keep her blood pressure low and her diet strict, but with two years down and three to go on the waiting list for a new kidney, she's desperately searching for help.

Hope recently glimmered when one of Carroll's interior design clients in Colorado volunteered to be a donor. She cleared the blood screening, but further tests at UCSF showed the woman would have difficulty undergoing the procedure.

"We wouldn't want to hurt anyone else," Carroll said.

Her sister, Wendy Moore, lives in Carmel but has the wrong blood type, as do other family members, and Carroll is hanging her hopes on a Carmel good Samaritan stepping forward.

"I feel this community is where my kidney's going to come from," she said.

Meanwhile, Carroll keeps her spirits up by immersing herself in the interior design work she so enjoys and taking comfort in the support of her sister and friends.

Potential donors with Type-O blood can call The Pine Cone at 624-0162 ext. 113. Carroll said her insurance will cover all costs of testing and surgery. Although all surgery carries risk, the process of kidney donation is less invasive now that it can be done through four small incisions, according to Carroll, and recovery takes about four days.

It would be done at the University of California, San Francisco Medical Center.

City to negotiate contract with nonprofit to run Sunset Center

By MARY BROWNFIELD

DESPITE SOME objections to the idea of a nonprofit running Sunset Center, the Carmel City Council decided 3-1 Tuesday to enter negotiations with a newly formed group to do just that.

"We do need to come to closure on this, because to maximize the potential for Sunset, we've got to keep it marketed and full and busy," Mayor Sue McCloud told The Pine Cone.

City administrator Rich Guillen recommended the council authorize him to negotiate a management and lease agreement with Sunset Cultural Center Corporation, which incorporated Oct. 6.

Guillen said after the meeting that he was impressed with the credentials of the nine-member board of trustees, which includes banker Demi Briscoe, CPA Sarah Brown (board treasurer), lawyer Karen Kadushin (board secretary), hotelier Gary Luce, lawyer Michael McMahan, CEO Fred O'Such, commercial real estate investor Jim Price (board chairman), business manager James Sanders and agribusiness executive Perry Walker.

Carmel Chamber of Commerce President Larry Hoover told the council he supported the nonprofit operating Sunset Center, but councilwoman Barbara Livingston, Olaf Dahlstrand and cultural commissioner Carol Hilburn said handing Sunset Center over to a nonprofit could deprive the public of its rights to use and control the city-owned facility.

"A nonprofit won't be answerable to the public or the city council," said Livingston, who cast the single no vote. She worried that past users of the center and small local groups might be pushed out by rate hikes and bookings.

The council could require the nonprofit to make monthly or quarterly reports and ask it to open its board meetings to the public, according to Guillen.

"As part of the negotiations, they'll have

Answer to puzzle on page 12A

Marc Béique, opposing Kristi Markey in Monterey, said he thinks greater voter participation will tip the numbers in his, Foy's and Knight's favor.

"If you look at the historical voting pattern of the water board, the strident minority has only been able to achieve office in years with low voter turnout," he said. "They do that because their ranks vote no matter what."

In 1999, directors Molly Erickson and Kris Lindstrom (both of whom are not running again but have endorsed the Henson-Pacelli-Markey slate) were elected with 1,388 votes and 2,850 votes, respectively, beating their opponents by 201 votes and 171 votes. In 2001, director Judi Lehman won by 262 votes with a total of 1,261. Both elections had very low turnouts.

"In this election, I talked to most of the candidates and I told them this is a new day. Turnouts will be higher and people will be voting sooner," Anchundo said, adding that countywide absentee voting has also experienced an "astonishing increase."

Prior to 2002, Monterey County had 3,500 permanent absentee voters because the law reserved that privilege for the disabled. But a recent change boosted that number to 40,000 permanent absentee voters among the 150,000 registered voters in Monterey County.

"It's a new day and a new way," he said.

Classic campaigning no more

The all-mail method means no more typical final campaign pushes hours before the polls open — an aspect which has proved challenging for some candidates.

Henson said he and his slate mates planned accordingly.

"We anticipated a number of people might get the ballot, open it, fill it out and be done with it," he said. "We had our mailer in voters' hands the next day or the day after that."

Pacelli said, "We had to have our signs up and the end-of-campaign rush had to be at the beginning of the campaign, which is hard for some of us who are generating money as we go along."

Béique said it forced him to get his campaign points out early and keep them in the public eye for longer.

"It's much more difficult because there's nothing to target," he said. "It's much more expensive and it's hard to hold people's attention for an extended period of time."

Henson expressed disappointment that the local papers have yet to release official endorsements more than a week after ballots were sent to voters.

"The day the ballots reach the voters, the next day the election's done," said.

What to do

With ballots due back by Nov. 4, voters should make their choices, seal the ballots in the envelope provided, sign the outside and get them in the mail well before election day. If all else fails, they can take their ballots to one of numerous drop-off stations.

Upon arrival, ballots are subjected to a verification process in which staff review the envelope to make sure the voter hasn't checked the box indicating the ballot has been spoiled, scan the bar code to update the voter's file and compare the signature with the voter registration card, according to Anchundo.

The ballot is then removed and stored in a secure, locked room with 24-hour video surveillance.

Anyone unable to mail a ballot in time can take it to one of several Peninsula drop-off points, including Sunset Center in downtown Carmel, RLS School in Pebble Beach, the Community Church in Carmel Valley, St. Dunstons on Robinson Canyon at mid-valley, Carmel Highlands Fire Station, Oldemeyer Center in Seaside, Del Rey Oaks City Council Chambers, the Monterey Youth Center on Pearl Street, Monterey Senior Center at Lighthouse and Dickman streets, the Methodist Church at Soledad and Pacific in Monterey, the Masonic Temple on Congress Avenue in P.G. and First Church of God on David Avenue in P.G.

Anchundo and his staff will begin counting ballots Nov. 3, and the results should be announced after 8 p.m. Nov. 4.

Stormwater ballot update

Meanwhile, ballots are also pouring in for Carmel-by-the-Sea's stormwater utility fee, in which the city is asking property owners to pay an average $2.99 per month to help cover the costs of a stormwater runoff program.

Of the 3,155 ballots mailed to voters last month, 1,710 have been returned. The ballots are due by Monday, Nov. 3, and the results will be announced at the Nov. 4 city council meeting, according to city clerk Karen Crouch.

'In this election, I talked to most of the candidates and I told them this is a new day. Turnouts will be higher and people will be voting sooner.'

New county counsel gets introduction to controversy, Monterey style

By REGAN CAREY

HE'S BEEN called a coward, a communist, and worse. When your job involves advising county lawmakers on the legality of their actions and drafting the laws they enact, at some point you are bound to be unpopular. But Monterey County's new county counsel, Charles McKee, said occasional opposition hasn't deterred him from working to preserve the integrity of the law.

McKee encountered a bit of a hornet's nest in his previous job, county counsel for Nevada County. When the war in Iraq began last March, several supervisors wanted to draft a resolution supporting President Bush and American troops, and "wanted to do it right away," said McKee. The war began on a Wednesday, and the supervisors wanted to draft the resolution the following Tuesday. The problem was they failed to get it on the agenda in time — by state law, an agenda item cannot be added within 72 hours of the meeting — but insisted on adding it as an emergency item anyway. McKee had to tell them there was no legal justification for calling it an emergency item.

Although McKee did not take sides on the war itself, he was soon caught up in a tug of war between supervisors who supported the war and wanted the resolution and those who didn't. He was called a coward (among other things) but continued to advise the supervisors not to violate the law when they didn't have to, saying it would only give their opponents grounds for attack. In the end, the board waited the extra week, added the item legally, and adopted the resolution after several hours of debate.

Public opinion of him has not always been charitable either. When the Nevada County board asked him to draft an ordinance requiring wood stoves to be replaced with less polluting models when their owner sold his house, McKee heard from one constituent that his ordinance would "make the communist party proud."

Since April, McKee's primary clients have been Monterey County supervisors, to whom he provides legal advice and, in his words, tells "how to most effectively promote their projects." With land use controversies, budget cuts, employee contracts and numerous other issues on the board's agendas, McKee often has to deal with complex issues not only legally but quickly.

"Not everyone appreciates that we don't know things off the top of our heads," he said.

McKee attended University of Maine School of Law and, after graduating, drove the more than 3,000 miles west to the San Francisco Bay area, which he had fallen in love with when he spent a summer interning for a Federal Judge. After a brief stint as a law clerk for a private firm in Santa Rosa, McKee steadily climbed the ladder of public law, working as an attorney for the city of Vallejo, as deputy county counsel for Marin County, and most recently, as counsel for Nevada County.

When recruiters contacted McKee in their hunt for a new Monterey County Counsel after Adrienne Grover was appointed to the Superior Court bench a year ago, his interest was piqued. While he had enjoyed his time in Nevada County, "I knew at some point I'd migrate back to the coast, so when the opportunity came, I jumped on it," McKee called Grover to ask her about the position, and Grover was very enthusiastic. However, the board of Supervisors in Nevada County was not so enamored with the prospect of McKee leaving; they liked him so much they even threatened not to accept his resignation.

McKee said his new job has "enough new challenges to keep me busy for awhile." Every county has land use issues, but they are more hotly debated here than in other places he has worked, including Marin and Nevada Counties. Using General Plan Update discussions as an example, he described how some people who are anti-growth will support the push for affordable housing while, at the other end of the spectrum, those who tend to be pro-growth may oppose development because of concerns about transportation. "Strange bedfellows sometimes come out of it all," he observed.

Outside work, McKee is settling into coastal life — he recently bought a sea kayak. He also enjoys running and biking. (He dislocated a finger in a mountain biking incident at Ford Ord a couple of months ago). In fact, since he moved here, he has discovered parts of the county previously unknown to him, including Salinas, the agricultural community, Carmel Valley and Moss Landing. He touted his love of Monterey, Pacific Grove and Big Sur as enough to bring him here, but said, "I'm happy to find out there's a lot more."

to prepare a business plan; we'll have to review it; we'll seek legal counsel, and there are steps to go through," he said, adding that he asked council members to submit their recommendations on what issues should be raised during negotiations.

"In my mind, it's not so much a loss of control as managing the center and having a partnership," he said, adding that he hopes to have a contract ready for review within the next two months.

At the same meeting, the council also voted unanimously to boost the project budget by $205,831 to cover construction overages from the $21.65 million renovation and decided to enter a $50,000 maintenance and repair agreement with Pacific Coast Train Service for the center's ventilation and air conditioning systems.

A Deductibility Primer

You already know that you can deduct the mortgage interest and local property taxes you pay against your income on your annual tax return. You also know that in the year when you purchase your home with a new mortgage, you can deduct the origination "points" you pay.

There are two aspects to the tax law regarding deductibility that many of us get tripped up by, though. The first is that the deduction of origination points paid for a refinancing mortgage has to be prorated over the life of the loan. The second is that we are allowed to deduct interest paid on the declining balance on our purchase money mortgage plus a maximum of $100,000. Thus, if we have a $200,000 mortgage that we refinance with a $350,000 mortgage, some of the interest we pay on our new mortgage will not be deductible.

Obviously, it's advisable to do all real estate financing under the watchful eye of your tax expert. Your real estate professional, though not a tax advisor, is a good resource as well, helping you ask the relevant questions of the person who is your licensed tax advisor. For help asking the right questions, call Maureen at 622-2565 and visit her website at www.maureen-mason.com.

Local Red Cross chapter needs volunteers, ASAP

By MARY BROWNFIELD

WITH A tiny paid staff, the Carmel Chapter of the American Red Cross considers its 320 volunteers its lifeblood. But as some retire, move away or discover they no longer have as much time to spare or energy to give, the nonprofit is seeking more help in anticipation of a busy holiday season.

"We need more volunteers, because they're not always available when we need them," said Red Cross staffer Anna Azzopardi. "We have to keep adding new people who want to be active more often."

The longtime dedication of some Red Cross volunteers attests to the benefits of working for the nonprofit, according to Phyllis Crockett, a California State Health and Safety consultant. Her volunteer career began 60 years ago as a water safety instructor at the age of 17, but she has since become a trainer for other instructors, in the water and out, and has worked with chapters across the nation in various tasks.

"It makes you feel very good about what you can do," she said. "And my chapter has been so good to me."

Part of a volunteer's duties involves bringing others on board, and Crockett points to Di Whitesides, who runs the Carmel Valley Community Center pool, as part of her legacy. Whitesides took her water safety instructor class from Crockett more than 30 years ago and now trains others as well.

"There is a place for leadership volunteers, and we have a route we can send them along," she said.

Opportunities of all kinds abound at the Red Cross, from public relations and front desk work to serving cake at the city's birthday party Oct. 25, and the Red Cross provides all necessary training.

After interested volunteers apply and interview, they can take their pick of a number of tasks, including:

- teaching CPR/first aid;
- interviewing, providing nursing services or staffing the canteen during blood drives;

- preparing bulk mailings;
- making thank-you phone calls;
- staffing special events, such as the Big Sur Health Fair and the lighting of the city's Christmas tree;
- youth services;
- disaster response;
- gardening; and
- knitting.

Learn something useful

Meanwhile, the Carmel Chapter is offering several classes to the public on lifesaving skills throughout November.

A four-hour class on Saturday, Nov. 1 will show students the ins and outs of basic first aid, including injury prevention and identifying and caring for life-threatening bleeding, sudden illness and injuries. Successful participants will receive a basic first aid certificate good for a year. Cost is $35.

A Nov. 13 class will focus on four-legged furry friends who might need a little help. Learn how to remedy pets' injuries and even perform CPR on cats and dogs during the Red Cross Pet First Aid Class set to run 6 to 9:30 p.m. Fee is $30.

An all-day course Nov. 15 will feature adult first aid and CPR. Students will learn to recognize and care for breathing and cardiac emergencies in adults, as well as identify and care for life-threatening injuries and sudden illnesses. This course meets OSHA guidelines for the workplace, and students will receive certificates in adult CPR and first aid upon completion. Call for course fee.

Preregistration is required for all classes, which are held at the chapter house at Dolores and Eighth in downtown Carmel. Call 624-6921.

NEW MAN AT HELM OF BIG SUR LAND TRUST

BILL LEAHY, the local Nature Conservancy liaison who helped orchestrate joint ventures with The Big Sur Land Trust, including the acquisition of Palo Corona Ranch, has been named the newest executive director of the BSLT.

Bill Leahy

After 11 years with The Nature Conservancy, Leahy will assume his new job Nov. 1 and replace attorney Zad Leavy, who temporarily took the post following the departure of former executive director Corey Brown.

Both conservation groups hailed Leahy's new post as pivotal in broadening the land trust's works and mission while maintaining a good relationship between the two nonprofits. His hiring was unanimously approved by the BSLT board of trustees and Leavy, who helped found the organization in 1978.

Alleged squatter arrested near Dolores Street home

PINE CONE STAFF REPORT

SUSAN BEACH, a well-known 53-year-old Carmel-by-the-Sea transient, was arrested Oct. 18 for burglary, illegal lodging and violating probation after allegedly living in a Dolores home, drinking the residents' wine and eating their food while they were away.

The couple returned from vacation to find a still-cold glass of beer in a back room, according to Sgt. Pete Poitras.

Susan Beach

Rather than face the then-unknown intruder on their own, they retreated and called police, who found Beach nearby and took her into custody.

A neighbor told officers she'd seen the woman coming and going from the residence over the past several days but did not know whether she had permission to be there. Police did not know how Beach gained entry to the home.

CARE

has come through word of mouth, she said, producing enough contributions for about 100 care packages. Free shipping will be provided through a Red Cross program, Operation Care and Comfort.

Monterey's Operation Yellow Ribbon plans to send its first shipment of care packages next week. The one-gallon plastic freezer bags will include such treasures as hotel-size shampoos, conditioners and lotions; raisins, Hi-C fruit snacks, granola bars, razors, mouthwash, lip salve, socks and even paperback novels. Burger King and McDonalds have donated single serving condiments, and local school children have contributed what may prove to be the most valuable item of all to soldiers far from home — letters. Composed in crayon and decorated with stickers or written neatly in pencil accompanied by simple drawings of the American flag, the students thank the troops for their service and wish them safe return.

One boy wrote, "I bet it's really tough over there in Iraq. I mean, I could NEVER be a soldier."

Julie DeMaria of Operation Care and Comfort shared with Bizzozero letters of appreciation that previous package recipients have sent to her. One sergeant, currently serving in Afghanistan with Operation Enduring Freedom, expressed gratitude to the "beautiful children that took time to color and write us all. The pictures painted a thousand words and moved a thousand hearts." A card from a regiment of National Guard soldiers out of Sacramento now stationed in Iraq wrote: "The supplies and letters are such a boost to our morale out here. Our days and nights here are long. We live for letters and packages." An individual note on the card said, "It's almost like Christmas when we receive mail and stuff."

Another wrote simply, "Thanks for taking care of us." One soldier from Sunnyvale wrote a letter to say, "Everything was put to good use either by us soldiers or it was shared with our Iraqi friends and their families." He added, "They truly appreciate our help as many of them have rather large families."

Another recipient, whose unit was recently notified they would be in Iraq well into 2004, requested additional support during the holiday season, and ended by saying, "We are deeply appreciative that Californians care about their soldiers."

After being assembled by residents of Gateway Center next week, the packages will go to the Red Cross's Operation Care and Comfort for distribution to soldiers from California. Because of security concerns, the army no longer allows random distribution, so Operation Care and Comfort has been collecting names of specific servicemen and women from troops who have returned home.

For those who would like to make donations or provide the name and mailing address of anyone stationed in Iraq who could accept packages for his or her unit, call Joan Bizzozero at 625-5128 or Susan Himsforth at 236-8192.

For a complete list of donateable items go to www.santaclaravalley.redcross.org. All donations are tax deductible and 100% go to the care packages, or, if requested by donor, to Operation Care and Comfort for shipping costs.

The public has already had plenty of opportunities to admire the impressive lobby and theater at the renovated Sunset Center, which had its debut last July during the Bach Festival. But this weekend's self-guided backstage tours will give most Carmelites their first look at the extensive work that went on behind the scenes, including major technical improvements and a new rehearsal room with a sprung floor, where Dance Kids and the Carmel Ballet Academy will be giving continuous dance demonstrations during the open house.

The city's Celebratory Opening Week continues Oct. 30 with a concert by the Vienna Boys Choir. The concert is sold out. For more information on all the week's activities, call 620-2020.

Carmel reads The Pine Cone!

M I L E S T O N E S

Services will be held from 1 to 4 p.m. Sunday, Nov. 2 in the Great Hall at the UC Berkeley Faculty Club for MARK N. CHRISTENSEN, professor emeritus of the Energy and Resources Group at the University of California at Berkeley and the second chancellor of UC Santa Cruz.

Mr. Christensen succumbed to cancer Oct. 2 at his home in Carmel. He was 73.

Born in Green Bay, Wisc., Mr. Christensen spent most of his life in the west. He turned 20 while climbing Mount Logan with three friends from the University of Alaska, Fairbanks, where he received a bachelor's degree in geology in 1952. His team was the second to ascend that peak. He was able to revisit the summit with his son and daughter this past summer.

Mr. Christensen earned his Ph.D. in geology from UC Berkeley and became a faculty member there in 1959. He received UC Berkeley's Distinguished Teaching Award in 1962. He served as head of the Academic Senate from 1970 to 1972, when he was appointed vice chancellor to then-Chancellor Albert Bowker.

He established the Energy and Resources Committee which he then personally guided through academic channels to become the Energy and Resources Group, an interdisciplinary research and teaching program.

He served as chancellor of UC Santa Cruz from July 1974 through January 1976 and returned to UC Berkeley to teach geology and geophysics. His research focused on energy, the environment and development, with a focus on energy conservation and renewable-energy resources. He retired in 1994 as professor emeritus of energy and resources.

Mr. Christensen continued to advise UC Berkeley doctoral students. He also helped found the Carmel River Watershed Council and worked on issues involving the Carmel River. He enjoyed leading hikes through Point Lobos.

Mr. Christensen had a jubilant sense of humor, and loved to sing and play the piano. He was known for his intellectual rigor, his friendliness, and enthusiasm. His life was a synthesis of exuberance in the outdoors and curiosity about nature, from the mountains of Alaska to Chile, from Greece to the Sierra Nevada.

He is survived by his wife, Regine Godfrey of Carmel; a son, Abe, of Berkeley; a daughter, Karen Christensen-Jones of Felton; former spouse Helen of Berkeley; and a grandson, Cole Jones of Felton.

Remembrances are preferred in Mark Christensen's name to the UC Regents: Attn: Lee Tajbakhsh at the Energy and Resources Group, UC Berkeley, 310 Barrows Hall, Berkeley, CA 94720.

WIFE BEATS HUSBAND, HUSBAND BEATS WIFE

Jung Yi coaches Carmel High's varsity volleyball team while her husband, David Crabbe, leads the opponents in Pacific Grove. Their daughter, Emma, keeps the peace by hanging out with both teams, but which will she root for when they play each other Friday night in Carmel?

Either way OK with local coaching couple

By MARY BROWNFIELD

THEY COULD be the James Carville and Mary Matalin of local high school volleyball. Carmel couple Jung Yi and David Crabbe are accomplished volleyball players, and combined they possess a quarter-century worth of coaching experience.

For opposing teams.

The two will face each other again Friday, when the Pacific Grove Breakers battle the Carmel Padres in girls' varsity volleyball.

"It's hard for me to be super competitive against her," said Crabbe, who has led girls' volleyball at Pacific Grove High School since the mid-1980s. "I coach to win, but it's a little uncomfortable, because I'm also rooting for Jung."

Yi, who started as Carmel High's JV volleyball coach in 1993 and became head coach four years later, said she actually likes the job even more when the two of them are peering at each other from opposite sides of the court.

"I enjoy it, because I get to see him in the same gymnasium and spend time with him," she said.

Long work weeks

That attests to just how busy the pair, who married in April 2001 and have a 14-month-old daughter, really are. On top of Yi's full-time job in charge of real estate ad sales at The Pine Cone and Crabbe's work as a commercial fisherman and realtor, each spends another 20 hours a week coaching, sometimes coming home as late as 10 p.m.

In the competitive world of high school athletics and considering the longtime rivalry between Carmel and Pacific Grove, an occasional heated, spouse-vs.-spouse exchange might be understandable. But Crabbe and Yi have no problem maintaining their manners, though they admitted teasing each other when sports reporters come calling for the coach whose team is ahead.

"I'll joke about what the headline in the paper might say," he said.

Fortunately for marital bliss, the couple's teams haven't been in a position to push each other out of the playoffs, but one recent season came close. Carmel beat P.G. in a match which lowered P.G.'s chances of entering the playoffs, but in the end Crabbe's team made the cut.

This year, Yi's girls are going strong at 10-1 in the Mission Trail Athletic League competition, with the most recent win coming Wednesday against King City, while Crabbe's team has had five wins and four losses. Including matches and tournaments against non-league schools, the Padres' record is 17-7, while the Breakers are even at 10-10. Both have several games yet to play before the season ends next month.

Congratulations prevail

Despite their face-to-face competition, congratulations prevail over enmity when it comes to the winners and losers.

"If there's ever any disappointment in losing to each other, it's always outweighed by the other team's success," he said.

At home, Yi said, it's "volleyball talk central" all season long, and the two coaches often compare notes on opponents they've recently encountered.

- ♦ Building a water project that will bring water to the cities and the Carmel River -- water for legal lots of record, remodels, affordable housing, drought protection, and the Carmel River.
- ♦ Keeping water policies flexible and workable for the cities until that water project can be completed.
- ♦ Bringing the public voice back into water policy decisions by electing a director who will listen to YOU.
- ♦ Finding workable solutions that keep our water bills as low as possible by sharing the costs.

be and what to expect," Crabbe said, adding that comparisons often also yield more than one strategy for success. "We work together more than we work apart."

That might explain why the two hope to one day coach together for the same team.

"We feel like we're both good coaches, but together, we could be great coaches," Crabbe said.

They also contend their players have more respect for each other because of the relationship Crabbe and Yi share.

But at the ripe old age of 14 months, daughter Emma Crabbe is definitely a Breakers fan, at least this year.

"She goes to every practice with me," her father said. And before one of their recent husband-versus-wife matches, he admitted surreptitiously dressing their daughter in Breaker colors, red and gold.

Carmel is set to face P.G. in the Carmel High School gym around 6 p.m. Oct. 24.

of who would stand to benefit from the project: a man who has a family, makes $30,000 a year and lives in another city where he is currently paying $1,200 monthly rent for a very modest apartment. In the proposed village, he would qualify for an affordable unit and could pay as low as $600 a month. And not only would his monthly payments go down, but his commute would be all but eliminated.

The reduction in traffic the proposed village would bring about is another of its benefits, Lombardo said. If golfing ceases on the 18-hole West Course of Rancho Cañada, so would the approximately 100,000 traffic trips per year its current use generates. The proposal also includes a provision to reserve many of the new units for people already working in Big Sur, Carmel Highlands, Carmel Valley and Carmel in an effort to reduce commutes that result from the current lack of affordable and workforce housing on the Peninsula, Lombardo added.

Consultant Barry J. Long elaborated on other environmental benefits of the project. He maintained the compact nature of lots in the new project would reduce outdoor watering, lowering water use at each unit by thousands of gallons a year.

He also described how one mile of river frontage — comprising approximately 35 acres of the 72-acre parcel — would be maintained as permanent open space and restored to native habitat, benefitting two threatened species.

Lombardo even suggested the prospect of electric cars in the community, saying that for the golf-cart-like-vehicles, "Something like this is absolutely ideal."

Lombardo and Long said they have not encountered any of the traditional opposition that development plans usually incur in Carmel Valley — yet. "Everyone we've met with so far has been very supportive," Lombardo said.

'Without providing livable, good housing for our people, we will be a diminishing county.'

— Nick Lombardo

"They see the Monterey Peninsula as a significant source of income, because generally the accounts and credit card limits are higher among citizens here than on their home turf," he said. "So it's really advisable that our citizens seriously pay attention this time to these warnings."

They should not only to lock their cars, but take everything which could be used in identity theft — checkbooks, wallets, purses, even car registration — inside.

Poitras believes several criminals are at work, some armed with sophisticated theft devices like blank keys and lock picks.

A theft in broad daylight earlier this month may support that theory.

After leaving their Toyota convertible parked downtown on a Sunday afternoon for only 40 minutes, a Sonoma couple returned to discover many of their belongings had been stolen. But the car bore no signs of forced entry, and the alarm was still on, just as they left it.

Charles Willard and his wife, Patricia, returned to their car parked in front of the Eastwood building on San Carlos Street at 2:25 p.m. Oct. 12, and as he inserted the key in the trunk lock, he noticed it was ajar. The couple discovered more than $5,000 worth of their possessions were missing from the trunk and the back seat.

They immediately called police before unlocking the car, and all observed the alarm was still armed.

"We dusted for prints but didn't find anything," Poitras said. "We asked if he could have left the trunk open, but he was sure he locked it."

Willard said the only signs of tampering he noticed were a small, light mark underneath the trunk latch and a dislodged piece of plastic directly inside, but he and police have no idea how someone might have managed to steal the items from the car and reactivate the alarm. Police immediately warned the Willards of the possibility of identity theft.

"Organized gang members are beginning to choose this as their method of operation," Poitras said. "We're expecting more of this, not less."

He asked anyone who might have information about the thefts and burglary in the area of Monterey and Lobos late Oct. 21 or early Oct. 22, a theft at San Carlos and First the night of Oct. 22, or the Willards' Oct. 12 incident, to call the station at 624-6403.

Will's Fargo features steaks to swoon over and then some WILL'S FARGO Dining House and Saloon, famous as a rustic steak house since 1959, has always been a Carmel Valley Village favorite. But even though it's gone up-scale under the aegis of Valley Resort Managements (operators of Bernardus Lodge and Quail Lodge Resort & Golf Club) it still manages to keep its old-fashioned western flair and still serves cherry pie.

The western-style dining room with its timber-lined walls and beamed ceiling has elaborately framed 1800s-style pictures nailed to the walls. But the white tablecloths teamed with starched napkins and frosted pink glass-shaded candles are anything but rustic, and set a pleasant and even romantic tone to the dining room.

Executive Chef Cal Stamenov is also executive chef at Bernardus and Quail, but Will's chef de cuisine is Jerome Viel, a Frenchman from Brittany, only four years in the states.

Although there is a lengthy list of appetizers, soups and salads, each full dinner includes soup or salad, baked or twice-baked potato or french fries and garlic cheese bread.

Soup of the night last Wednesday was crab bisque in tomato broth which can only be described as fabulous, and the dinner salad was composed of exceptional organic heirloom lettuce topped with a succulent crumbled Roquefort dressing.

Thought of primarily as a steak house (the retired meat scale and cold cabinet from days of yore are still displayed near the entrance) and steaks are still listed on the menu by cut and weight. All are Nebraska corn-fed beef, hand-selected and aged.

Will's rib-eye (14 oz.), filet mignon (7 oz.), and Porterhouse (24 oz.), are $17.95, $22.95 and $36.95, respectively. Prime flat iron ($15.95) — a European cut from the chuck area of prime beef — is one the of the most flavorful steaks around, and seldom seen on local menus. Kansas City certified Angus New York steak ($26.95) rounds out the beef menu. Cornish game hen, veal liver with bacon and onions (a famed Venetian dish), and grilled quail are available, too, from $13.95 to $16.95.

Daily selections of fresh fish are announced on a board and on menus at the table: wild salmon, sea bass, Alaska halibut, red snapper, yellowfish tuna, swordfish, and planked salmon with wild mushroom mousse and beurre blanc were on the fish menu the night we dined, which could be ordered grilled with mango salsa or oven roasted on seasoned oak planks with lemon olive oil.

Succulent halibut

We opted for the oven-roasted halibut ($19.95), which was tender, succulent and flavorful, but we could have done without that dark plank which was balanced across our plate with the twice baked potato and buttered asparagus. The food was all superbly prepared and wonderfully tasty.

Our dinner companion ordered the 7 oz. filet mignon ($22) which also turned out to be extremely flavorful and tender (she made swooning sounds, and rolled her eyes) and we had glasses of Bernardus Chardonnay ($6) and Cabernet Sauvignon ($7) to complement the fish and beef.

We really have to sing the praises of all Bernardus wines. We have tasted them all and have yet to experience one that does not thrill us. The wine list offers a preponderance of Carmel Valley and Monterey County wines, but nicely selected wines from Northern California augment the list. The wines are fairly priced, too, with many in the $28 to $36 range, but others from $17 to $75 a fifth are offered, also.

There are front and back patios for Sunday brunch, which, it should be mentioned, boasts an 18-foot buffet with such yummys as quiche Lorraine and leek tart, eggs Benedict, prime rib, pouched salmon, celery remoulade, sweet couscous, fruit, croissants, fruit pancakes, and on and on. There is also an 8-foot dessert table. Prices are $27, adults, $13, children.

Rumi to be performed at Sunset Theater

THIRTEENTH century Sufi poet, Jelaluddin Rumi, will be read by his celebrated translator, Coleman Barks, accompanied by Mohammed Nejad on ancient musical instruments, and sung by internationally honored Aqnazar.

At 6 p.m., Sunday, Dec. 7, at Sunset

WILL'S FARGO

The ambiance at Will's Fargo is pleasant; the entrance bar, which provides a social atmosphere, is made cozy with a fire crackling in the fireplace. A fire pit on the back patio and tall heat lamps in the front patio assure warmth, should the weather require it. A thick hedge around the front patio screens it from the village road.

Chef Viel is doing a splendid job, and is adding to an already excellent, well thought out menu. A true cobb salad, exactly as it was prepared in Hollywood's Brown Derby restaurant, will soon be added to Chef Viel's creations.

Dinner is served from 5 to 9 p.m. week-nights and until 10 weekends. Lunch, Wed. to Sat., 11:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. Bar menu, 2:30 to 9:30 p.m. daily. The Saloon is open until midnight, and live music enlivens the dinner hour Wed. and Thurs. 7 p.m. to 10 p.m. Sunday brunch buffet is offered from 10:30 a.m. to 2 p.m.

Theater, Carmel-by-the Sea, the mystic Sufi's words will be heard as they were more than 600 years ago, contemporary in their messages of the divine, human nature and love.

Tickets may be purchased from the producer, Conway of Asia, 624-3643, for $50 preferred seating and $30 general. Proceeds will benefit the Nepali Youth Opportunity Foundation.

'Laughter on the 23rd Floor' staged at CHS

Murder among the antiques in Carmel-by-the-Sea

FOLLOW A Carmel-by-the-Sea antique dealer in the throes of sprucing up a rundown Ocean Avenue shop who stumbles on a murder at an early morning garage sale, and you have a crackerjack mystery novel from beginning to end.

Local author Elaine Flinn has created "Dealing in Murder," the first of three Molly Doyle mysteries for which she has a contract with Avon Books, an imprint of HarperCollins Publishers, New York City.

The antique dealer is Molly Doyle, a hard-as-nails-through-adversity business woman approaching 40 who relocates to our West Coast village from a chic and prospering Manhattan antique store.

Her husband — who has left her for a younger, talented antique restorer — involves her in a criminal scam that ruins her otherwise spotless reputation. Molly finds it expedient to put as much distance as possible between her besmirched reputation and her husband. That's when she starts anew in Carmel-by-the-Sea using her maiden name.

But as fate will have it, her police record is uncovered when a woman — stabbed at her Scenic Road residence — stumbles into her arms as Molly returns to a garage sale scene in search of a drawer key for a locked desk she has purchased.

The ensuing investigation brings Molly's innocent involvement in her husband's scam to light. Innocent or not, she has a police record, which she wants to clear. If she seeks out the killer, will she be able to do that? And is it worth the danger? And how involved with the police chief should she become?

Flinn's writing is excellent. It's easy to get carried along in the plot which she fleshes out with interesting characters. And it's always fun to read a book set in Carmel-by-the-Sea, especially when the corpus delicti is found in a Scenic Road driveway.

Author Flinn was herself an antique dealer in San Francisco for many years and this is her first novel. She recently appeared on an author's panel in Las Vegas at Bouchercon, the international mystery conference held in various cities around the world, and attended by hundreds, if not thousands of mystery fans. She will be appearing at a 3:30 p.m. book signing at Thunderbird Bookshop, The Barnyard Shopping Village, Carmel, on Saturday, Nov. 1. The 368-page paperback retails for $6.50 and is available at most local book stores.

THE MONTEREY Writers Roundtable will hear David Spiselman, CEO of CyclopsMedia.com speak on "The Future of Publishing: The Growing Relevance of E-Books" at 7 p.m. Nov. 6 at Thunderbird Bookshop.

"WOMEN'S VOICES: What Survives" will be an evening of poetry and music dedicated to the memory of Monterey's longtime journalist and poet, the beloved Bonnie Gartshore. Laura Bayless, Diana Garcia and Jennifer Lagier will read, and Amy Krupski will play the Celtic harp at 7:30 p.m. Thursday, Nov. 6 at the Carl Cherry Center for the Arts, Fourth and Guadalupe, Carmel-by-the-Sea. Steven E. Tager, D.P.M. is pleased to announce the establishment of his podiatry practice on the Monterey Peninsula.

For the last 22 years, Dr. Tager has been in private practice in Cupertino, CA. The attraction of Monterey magnetized the Tagers resulting in their move two years ago. He was urged by many professionals to re-establish his practice due to the uniqueness of his expertise in sports medicine of the foot and ankle and lower extremity biomechanics. The suggestion overwhelming, coupled with the challenge, the concept is now a reality.

Dr. Tager received his undergraduate education at Arizona State University and his doctorate from the Ohio College of Podiatric Medicine and Surgery. He entered private practice in Cranston, RI after completing his residency at St. Luke's and Children's Hospital in Philadelphia, PA. Over the next sixteen years, he developed one of the largest practices in southern New England. His practice was earmarked with patients from Brown University, The University of Rhode Island, Bryant college, The New England Patriots Football Club, The Rhode Island Wheelman as well as many high school and weekend athletes. He developed a following of athletes due to his expertise in lower extremity biomechanics as many athletic injuries are often a result of subtle, inherited anomalies found in the foot and leg. These minor, and often overlooked anomalies, when stressed, manifest themselves in the form of overuse injuries that might otherwise never occur if treated early in life. Hence, he developed a proficiency in treating children with foot and leg pain experienced during and after sports, often passed off by Pediatricians as growing pains. He is also the author of many articles written and published in the Yankee Runner during its existence in New England.

In the early eighties, he moved his family to the Silicon Valley and re-established his podiatry practice, specializing in the treatment of adult and children's lower extremity biomechanics, sports medicine and surgery of the foot. He worked with the athletic trainer at Deanna college for many years and was the Podiatrist for the Saturn Cycling Team when they were based in Los Gatos. He is currently a member and past president of the Santa Clara County Podiatric Medical Society. He is also a member and past president of Region 1 of the American Podiatric Medical Association (APMA), and maintains membership in the California Podiatric Medical Association. Some of his past affiliations include The American Academy of Podiatric Practice management and the American Academy of Podiatric Sports Medicine of which he has achieved fellowship status. He also holds a patent on a device which compensates for a variety of structural abnormalities frequently found in the foot known to cause acquired deformities like bunions, bunionsettes, heel spurs, neuromas and hammer toes to name a few.

If you, a friend or family member has a foot problem, perhaps we can be of some assistance. Please feel free to give us a call.

EditorialAudit this

FROM THE moment he announced his candidacy for governor, Arnold Schwarzenegger's campaign had an aura of inevitability about it. Elections, after all, are more about popularity than policy, and it should have been obvious that an international movie star's fame would give him an enormous advantage. Nevertheless, numerous big city reporters and editors were apparently taken by surprise when Schwarzenegger won. How else to explain the colossal "land-slide" headlines used to describe his 48.6 percent plurality? And now, on top of the naiveté they showed covering the recall, the pundits — who predicted Schwarzenegger's support for Prop 187 and his opposition to giving driver's licenses to illegal aliens would cost him the election — have started cynically deconstructing his campaign promises.

"Despite his pledge that every Californian would have a 'great job,' Schwarzenegger may have to start laying off thousands of state employees as soon as he takes office," said a reporter on KCBS radio this week. As if Schwarzenegger meant the economy would take off the instant he took office.

Similarly, his pledge to "audit everything" to eliminate wasteful spending and reduce the deficit has been mocked by some columnists, who gleefully proclaim that Schwarzenegger is in over his head and will soon be stymied by the Sacramento bureaucracy.

But we agree that state government, especially under Gray Davis, has been colossally profligate, and we'd like to help out the new governor by pointing out a couple of examples of unnecessary spending of California taxpayers' dollars right here in the Monterey Peninsula.

First of all, a traffic signal installation is underway in Pacific Grove, along with a complete realignment of the intersection of Forest Avenue and Sunset Drive, at a cost to Caltrans of almost $200,000. This intersection is hardly one of the most dangerous in the state. The new traffic signal could easily have been delayed.

And right here in Carmel, a $220,000 state grant has just been awarded for landscaping at Sunset Center.

Do these projects outweigh the need to reduce the state's huge budget deficit? Obviously, the answer is No. Rather, they are among thousands of examples of the runaway check-writing train that is the government.

It will take someone of near-super-human strength and courage, and who has the public's support and attention, to stop it. With inauguration day still a few weeks off, it's a bit too soon to declare Schwarzenegger a failure.

C.V. Association on target

Dear Editor,

The upcoming election for the Water Board presents clear choices for the voters. In our newsletter, the Carmel Valley Association (CVA) pointed out the different positions espoused by several candidates. Included were Zan Henson, the current Chair of the Water Board, and Larry Foy, the former General Manager of the California-American Water Company.

We noted that Cal-Am still has an application for the massive "Developer's Dam" proposed for the Carmel River pending before the State Public Utilities Commission. Henson opposed this project. Foy spent his years with Cal-Am defending the dam.

Senator Bruce McPherson's SB 149 was intended to take away the public's right to vote for their Water Board representatives, and on the size and scope of water projects. Henson opposed this anti-democratic legislation. Foy supported it.

In the election for the Pacific Grove/Pebble Beach seat, Robert Pacelli is facing Michelle Knight. CVA's newsletter noted that Knight had purchased water credits (thus allowing her to skip over people waiting on the water list) for her mansion on the dunes at Asilomar beach. Pacelli opposes water profiteering.

Development of new water sources (which all candidates support) will take years, making water profiteering an issue in this election. We think that the voters want to know who buys water from profiteers (Knight) and who opposes water profiteering (Pacelli).

Henson, Pacelli, and Kristi Markey have received their modest campaign contributions from their friends and neighbors. They have taken positions that align them with homeowner, resident and environmental organizations. Foy, Knight and Beique have received much of their much larger contributions from political action committees, developers and tourist industry representatives. In other words, the "special interests."

It is an old adage in politics, that if you want to know where a candidate stands, "Follow the Money." Henson, Pacelli and Markey will represent the public's interest. Their opponents will represent the special interests. Bottom line — that is the difference between the candidates.

John Dalessio

Commonsense candidates

Dear Editor,

The California Public Utilities Commission recently ordered Cal Am to file an application for the Moss Landing Desalination Plant recommended in their "Plan B" Water Supply study. At the recent candidate forum, Larry Foy, Marc Beique and Michelle Knight each stated they supported that project.

Contrarily, the Henson slate stated they opposed the project proposed by the CPUC and favored pursuing a desalination plant on the beach at Sand City. A similar project was previously rejected by the voters. It is not known whether the coastal commission or the marine sanctuary will approve the brine discharge at Sand City. It is unlikely they would, given the discharge at Moss Landing, greatly diluted by mixing with the cooling waters from the power plant, would be far less damaging to the marine environment. The costly and unnecessary boondoggle proposed by Henson is intended as a propaganda attempt to show that he and his "environmental majority" were actually bent on accomplishing something!

Vote for the objective, commonsense candidates: Larry Foy, Marc Beique and Michelle Knight.

Ed Lee, Carmel

Pine Cone 'misrepresented'

Dear Editor,

As a candidate for water board, Monterey division, I support local control on water issues, especially on a water supply project and its cost. Those who will foot the bill should be able to decide the size of the bill. For this reason, I favor a small water supply project — one that is capable of garnering a majority vote.

Otherwise, the project will be killed by the voters, like the dam. My opponent wants to take away your right to vote on water projects. That way the tourism industry and the developers who are financing his campaign can force you to pay for the water needed by their luxury hotels, tourist attractions and new subdivisions.

Everyone agrees we need to replace the approximately 8,000 acre feet of water that Cal-Am now illegally pumps out of the Carmel River. The desalination project that I support would generate 8,400 acre feet, providing 400 acre feet of water that could be used for remodels, lots of record, affordable housing, or other projects selected by the land use jurisdictions (the cities and county).

Additionally, the desalination plant could be expanded at a future time if the residents decide to make more water available for larger growth. By separating the issues of growth and water, we increase the chances of a successful vote on a project, resolving our long-standing deadlock resulting from unacceptable proposals.

Recent statements in The Carmel Pine Cone misrepresenting my views on these issues should be corrected. We need to stop the hysteria and extreme accusations that dominate the water debate, particularly around this election. Robert Pacelli, Zan Henson and I support a rational approach. We will preserve your right to vote on these important issues.

"Melodie" of Love

Melodie died of a heart attack on October 17 at midnight. She was not alone in her last brief moments. Her final departure seemed to be divinely scripted with unexpected blessings: a peaceful ending and beautiful resting place. She was a little "spark of the Divine" and radiated sunshine to everyone. Miss joy-to-the-world really knew how to work a crowd, including much paw shaking. Her spirit of happiness made everyone love her. Each night ended with a bedtime prayer — "now go to sleep with your poodle angels, Melodie." They have her now.

PALADIN LISKIN, 2, Song Schmidt, 7 months, and Leo Conner, 9, are play pals who can't wait to be picked up by Kim Conner every day from their respective homes and driven off for an hour or more of romping on Carmel Beach. Sometimes they're joined by others, but these three are the core group.

Dalmatian Paladin (Pal to his intimates) is Leo the basset hound's best friend, having been play pals for over a year. You can usually spot them as Pal chases Leo in the shallow water. Leo's short little legs and sturdy body churn through the surf, sea-soaked ears flapping, while more statuesque Pal, with long, slender polka dot legs gives graceful chase, holding back a little so as not to discourage Leo's somewhat slower but more strenuous aqueous flight.

Always-smiling Song, a Tibetan terrier not yet a year old, is the newest member of the trio, having joined the group only a few months ago. Though ever so feminine, the little terrier is not intimidated by her robust male companions, and is pleased she is accepted so well by her elders who keep an eye on her: Leo with his limpid brown eyes, and Pal with his one hazel eye and one baby blue eye.

"Carmel Legends"

Fortunately the heat has gone down considerably in recent years, but there is still a smoldering controversy about the origin of MONTEREY JACK CHEESE. One school holds that it was the inspired creation of Kate Harney Hatton, wife of William Hatton, the ranch manager whose other legacy is Hatton Fields. In the early 1890's, the Hattons controlled over 10,000 acres in the near reaches of Carmel Valley and built their home on Carmel Knolls. They ran an enormous herd of Holsteins on their lands and, even after selling quantities of milk and butter, still were faced with over-production. "What shall we do with this extra cream, Bill?" said Kate. "Why don't you make some cheese?" he answered. And thus miracles are made. Another view is that this delicacy was first invented on Los Laureles Rancho, with a special endowment provided by the Vanderbilts. This is a fine distinction and both sides may be right, since the LLR was also managed by Hatton. One splinter group contends that Monterey Jack was the creation of Jack London during his brief sojourn in Carmel. His product, we're told, was laced with Bourbon Whiskey infused under heat and pressure. Some say the fire that destroyed his home in Glen Ellen was the result of a miscalculation in the "Jack Process." Whatever... we find no explanation for why it's called Monterey Jack and not Carmel Jack or even Glen Ellen Jack. It's no matter, really, because it's a great contribution to American culture.

Julian Varlay and his dog, Bootes, played fetch last week at Carmel Beach in front of a sand dune that may have to be replaced with a sea wall, according to state regulators.

Coastal commission may require pricey seawalls on Carmel Beach

By PAUL MILLER

DESPITE ITS longstanding antipathy to seawalls along the state's shore, the staff of the California Coastal Commission has proposed that the commission require Carmel to build several new seawalls at the city's beach over the next five years.

"Without the seawalls, ongoing erosion can be expected to result in up to roughly two feet of bluff loss per year," the staff's report says. The erosion is likely even though the three locations south of 13th Avenue where the new seawalls would be built have been fortified with large boulders and overlaid with sand and vegetation, according to the coastal commission staff.

But city public works director Jim Cullem says it's too soon to know if the erosion estimate is correct. The city needs more time to determine whether expensive seawalls are required.

"The city engineer has established survey control points on Scenic Road, and over time we'll be able to collect data on how much erosion there is to the beach and the bluff," Cullem said. The five-year mandatory timeline for building new seawalls is premature, he added, because it will take five to eight years to measure beach erosion.

And the cost of granite-faced seawalls — a familiar sight along much of Carmel Beach — has escalated to the point that the city might not be able to afford them. "It's about $1,500 per linear foot," Cullem said. "So we're talking at least $200,000."

The coastal commission's requirement was proposed as part of an after-the-fact permit review of emergency repairs made to several sections of Carmel Beach last winter. Boulders were brought in, smaller stones were added to help keep the boulders in place and sand was replenished. Now, the commission may decide the boulders aren't good enough and must be removed.

The coastal commission will probably consider the issue at its December meeting in San Francisco, Cullem said.

Pebble Beach remodeling project wins approval

By REGAN CAREY

APPROVAL TO remodel and build additions on a Pebble Beach home sailed through the Monterey County Board of Supervisors Oct. 14. Earlier, the Del Monte Forest Land Use Advisory Committee recommended denial of the project, which would expand a 5,158-square-foot dwelling to 9,133-square-feet including development on a slope greater than 30 percent.

Despite the Del Monte Forest LUAC's objections to the height, "excessive bulk" and lot coverage of the project, reviews by the Monterey County Planning and Building Inspection Department, Water Resources agency, Public Works, Environmental Health Division and the local fire department had found the site "suitable for the use proposed."

In July, when the county zoning administrator issued a partial approval/partial denial that would have crippled the plans of applicants Mike and Jacquelyne Love, the couple filed an appeal. The board of supervisors reviewed their appeal and on Sept. 30 adopted a resolution of intent to approve the application.

At its October 14 meeting the board followed through and approved the project.

Heinrichs and First Lady at D.C. 'Elite Retreat'

PINE CONE STAFF REPORT

WHEN THE nation's leading real estate firm, Coldwell Banker, invited its top producers to a conference in Washington, D.C., recently, Ben Heinrich and his wife, Carole, of the company's Carmel office, were invited to be guest speakers.

But the highlight for them wasn't the chance to address 500 high-end real estate agents from around the country, Ben Heinrich said. It was sharing the podium, and having a chance to hob-nob, with former First Lady Barbara Bush.

"This is a lady who is known all over the world for speaking her mind," Heinrich said. "And when a mother is speaking her mind about her son, who happens to be President of the United States, it gets to be really interesting."

Heinrich said Mrs. Bush didn't directly refer to the bitter criticism directed at her son, President George W. Bush, by leading figures in the Democratic Party — in particular, Senator Edward Kennedy, who has accused the White House of lying about the war in Iraq.

But, "as any mother would, that kind of thing really gets her bristles up," Heinrich said. "The only time she ever really showed any emotion was when she talked about how hard the President is working — but then she smiled and said, 'I just think people should stop saying mean things about my son.'"

"She was just so energetic and so funny and so real," Carole Heinrich said.

"It was just great to be able to spend a little time with her," Ben Heinrich added. "She's the nation's grandmother."
